

Pawn shops are going upscale for affluent clients

By Russ Wiles, The Arizona Republic | Updated 7/15/2012 4:41 AM

Comment | Recommend (130) | Tweet (25) | +1 (2)

PHOENIX — Maybe it's the original artwork displayed around the office or the soft lighting, paneled walls, Persian rugs and leather furniture. The receptionist adds to the aura, too. So does the TV screen turned to a financial-news channel.

By Michael Soderstrom, The Arizona Republic
David Goldstein owns Biltmore Loan and Jewelry in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Whatever the reason, Biltmore Loan and Jewelry feels more like a stock brokerage or private-banking office than a pawn shop.

Still, the Scottsdale company makes loans collateralized on personal belongings. It thus fits the legal definition of a pawn shop and is regulated as one, despite the upscale touches.

"We want to give people a professional option with dignity," said David Goldstein, Biltmore's president and a veteran jewelry retailer. "We're private, quick and discreet."

Sponsored Links

For The Sender
Songs & Stories of Release, Redemption & Realization - Available Now!
<http://www.forthesender.com/>

"The Shift" Special Offer
Watch "The Shift" by Dr. Wayne Dyer Online for ONLY 0.99 Sept 25-Oct 1
www.hayhouse.com

Medical Phenomenon $9.99
Everyone Should Know About It. Your Healthy Living, Aging, Anger, Sex
www.MedicalPhenomenonBook.Com

Buy a link here

Pawn-brokering might be associated more with dingy storefronts cluttered with junk and customers desperate to scrape up enough cash for groceries or rent. But the recession, credit crunch and slow economic recovery have hit Americans up and down the socio-economic ladder, and that has created an opportunity to serve a more high-end clientele for firms like Biltmore.

"We're seeing an increase in these kind of stores in Beverly Hills and other affluent neighborhoods," said Emmett Murphy, a spokesman for the National Pawnbrokers Association. "People in all walks of life are in need of short-term credit."

Realty-TV shows such as "Pawn Stars" also have helped to change the image of the industry, which is more euphemistically referred to as collateralized or secured lending. High prices for gold and other precious metals, meanwhile, have brought out more people as borrowers and sellers.

It's not just job losses and paltry yields on savings accounts that have decimated personal incomes, forcing more people to consider short-term financing. Another key factor has been the general reluctance of banks to lend money, while often making the process so onerous and time-consuming that traditional loans don't make sense for small, short-term cash needs.

Even some businesses are turning to pawn transactions to raise money in a pinch.

James Verbic, a Scottsdale resident who runs a firm that operates ATM machines, said he recently sought a loan from Biltmore for business needs. He turned to Biltmore after getting the runaround from several of the largest banks operating in Arizona. He pledged more than a dozen paintings as collateral.

"I spent six months dealing with banks and five days dealing with (Biltmore)," he said.

Indeed, banks typically aren't equipped to evaluate and make loans on the types of collateral that people bring to pawn stores, including artwork, sports memorabilia, other collectibles, gold coins, jewelry, watches, musical instruments, diamonds, expensive electronic equipment and even firearms.

"We're a Band-Aid to use until the government corrects the banking system," Goldstein said.

Lofty rates

These services don't come cheap, however. Arizona, for instance, allows pawn establishments to charge interest rates of up to 8 percent a month for the first two months and 6 percent monthly thereafter. On a $100 loan, that works out to $22 in interest over a three-month period, though borrowers have the option of repaying loans earlier.

Rate ceilings are just the tip of the regulatory iceberg, as pawn operators must deal with many state, local and federal rules — from the anti-laundering Patriot Act to Internal Revenue Service reporting requirements. Among various regulations, shops must retain collateralized items on the premises and obtain proper identification from customers.

Because of the interest rates charged, the loans are more suitable for borrowings spanning a matter of months but not a year or more, said Iv Friedman, a semi-retired former pawn-store owner who now works part time at Scottsdale Loan Co., another upscale firm.

"Often around tax time, people will get kicked in the tail and need cash," he said, adding that small businesses for various reasons might require short-term help.

Those interest rates also reflect the fact that brokers accept some risk of not being able to sell unclaimed property for a good price when loans aren't repaid. For example, gold and silver have dropped significantly over the past year, so pawn businesses that bought a lot of metal back at the peak have lost money on their inventory. Losses also are possible on artwork, heirlooms, collectibles and more.

"We're shooting craps to a degree," Friedman said.

Nationally, loans typically are small and short-term, averaging $150 for three months, according to the National Pawnbrokers Association. Individuals who can't repay a debt will lose the items they pledged, though 85 percent of customers pay off the loans and reclaim their assets, the trade group reports.

If inclined, pawn businesses can extend much larger loans worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, or higher. They thus can cater to affluent individuals who find themselves asset rich but cash-flow poor.

"If you have a Monet on your wall and need money, we can help," Goldstein said. "For a lot of people, all they have left is stuff."

If you're thinking of applying for a loan, Murphy suggests shopping around, especially on more valuable items. "There's a lot of competition for high-end loans, and you can negotiate below the interest-rate caps." He also recommends a website, pawnfyndr.com, to locate stores.

Areas of expertise

Pawn shops sometimes specialize in or exclude certain types of assets. An upscale Atlanta firm called Chapes-JPL cites an expertise not just in diamonds, watches and jewelry but also in designer handbags and luggage. Expensive wine collections are another area of expertise, Murphy said.

Goldstein emphasizes diamonds and jewelry, among other items, but he doesn't deal in firearms or guitars. He and various other collateralized lenders also provide auto-title loans on lien-free vehicles. Goldstein calls the strong demand for this type of lending one of the surprises he has noticed since opening Biltmore (www.ifyouownbveloanonit.com) last year.

Although the interest charges can be stiff, there are advantages to working with a pawn establishment. Among them are speed, convenience, privacy and relatively little paperwork. In addition, credit checks aren't required. And if you can't repay a loan, that won't show up as a blotch on your credit history.

"If you default to a bank, your credit is murdered," Goldstein said. "If you default to us, there's no record."

Goldstein describes himself as a provider of liquidity and as a "market maker for products."

He said he doesn't desire to take possession of items through default and often charges interest rates well below Arizona's statutory caps.

"I want people to feel comfortable (with the process) and for it to be private," he said. "I'm not here to take their last thing."

For more information about reprints & permissions, visit our FAQ's. To report corrections and clarifications, contact Standards Editor Brent Jones. For publication consideration in the newspaper, send comments to letters@usatoday.com. Include name, phone number, city and state for verification. To view our corrections, go to corrections.usatoday.com.

Posted 7/15/2012 3:01 AM | Updated 7/15/2012 4:41 AM

More from USATODAY

Ops: 'Newsroom' star Alison Pill tweets topless photo USATODAY.COM in LifeLine Live

Ouch! Clint Eastwood bashes vintage Ford Mustangs USATODAY.COM in Drive On

What's hot in the shifting collectibles market USATODAY.COM in Money

Wrongly convicted inmates freed but get little help USATODAY.COM in News

Antibacterial DNA: Haier's Solution to Cleaner Washing and Drying (Washer Dryer Info)

More from the web

Asia's endangered species: The expat Global Connections

Clash of Candidates: What Happens If Obama Beats Romney? Real TV

Romney's Character Comes To Light, And It's Dark Indeed National Memo

The Daily Orbit: Asteroid To Pass By Earth Tonight and Orbit

products

He said he doesn't desire to take possession of items through default and often charges interest rates well below Arizona's statutory caps.

"I want people to feel comfortable (with the process) and for it to be private," he said. "I'm not here to take their last thing."

For more information about reprints & permissions, visit our FAQ's. To report corrections and clarifications, contact Standards Editor Brent Jones. For publication consideration in the newspaper, send comments to letters@usatoday.com. Include name, phone number, city and state for verification. To view our corrections, go to corrections.usatoday.com.

Posted 7/15/2012 3:01 AM | Updated 7/15/2012 4:41 AM

More from USATODAY

Ops: 'Newsroom' star Alison Pill tweets topless photo USATODAY.COM in LifeLine Live

Ouch! Clint Eastwood bashes vintage Ford Mustangs USATODAY.COM in Drive On

What's hot in the shifting collectibles market USATODAY.COM in Money

Wrongly convicted inmates freed but get little help USATODAY.COM in News

Antibacterial DNA: Haier's Solution to Cleaner Washing and Drying (Washer Dryer Info)

More from the web

Asia's endangered species: The expat Global Connections

Clash of Candidates: What Happens If Obama Beats Romney? Real TV

Romney's Character Comes To Light, And It's Dark Indeed National Memo

The Daily Orbit: Asteroid To Pass By Earth Tonight and Orbit

USA TODAY is now using Facebook Comments on our stories and blog posts to provide an enhanced user experience. To post a comment, log into Facebook and then "Add" your comment. To report spam or abuse, click the "X" in the upper right corner of the comment box. To find out more, read the FAQ and Conversation Guidelines.

16 comments | Add a comment

Antibacterial DNA: Haier's Solution to Cleaner Washing and Drying (Washer Dryer Info)

USA TODAY is now using Facebook Comments on our stories and blog posts to provide an enhanced user experience. To post a comment, log into Facebook and then "Add" your comment. To report spam or abuse, click the "X" in the upper right corner of the comment box. To find out more, read the FAQ and Conversation Guidelines.

16 comments | Add a comment

Mark Cacchione · Top Commenter · Shaw University
bs. they prey on the desperate.
Reply · 7 · Like · July 15 at 2:54am

Pablo Salinas · Top Commenter
NO ! It's a service , YOU just can't see beyond your nose .
Reply · 5 · Like · July 15 at 7:15am

Bruce Cohn · Top Commenter · San Rafael High
Pawnbrokers do not force anyone to come in the shop or to leave their collateral or to buy anything ... and staffed by good honest people trying to make a living it is not the pawn brokers fault that people who are out on their luck and have messed up does eric credit
Reply · 6 · Like · July 15 at 7:22am

Bruce Cohn · Top Commenter · San Rafael High
And messed up their credit are the clients
Reply · Like · July 15 at 7:23am

View 3 more

D Jeff Bell · Top Commenter · Marblehead, Massachusetts
Upscale pawn shop? Me thinks desperation is desperation and they can paint it in whatever color suits them. America the broke, Fiscal irresponsibility seems to be the only thing that has trickled down to the masses!
Reply · 5 · Like · July 15 at 5:57am

Richard Elliott · West Valley City, Utah
I agree. Upstick on a pig. The fall is going to be hard on the people, who are so blind.
Reply · 2 · Like · July 15 at 9:22am

Joseph L Cooke · Top Commenter · Works at Tac56 Consulting
Pawn shops seem to be owned and staffed by rather sleazy individuals. Are pawn shops boot camps for those who will go on to run car dealerships, banks, cell phone companies, and, cable companies?
Reply · 5 · Like · July 15 at 5:05am

Bruce Cohn · Top Commenter · San Rafael High
Nope they go into retirement in a nice place in hawaii is this a forum for idiots?
Reply · 3 · Like · July 15 at 7:25am

Mike Jones · Top Commenter · Kennesaw State University
Joseph. "And eventually go into politics" You forgot that one.
Reply · 2 · Like · July 15 at 9:01am

Jane Daffron · Top Commenter

Sam Haines · Top Commenter · Portage High School
Do you mean the Bush tax cuts that Obama now wants to extend for the benefit of the middle class? And are you seriously trying to say that Bush invented/created offshore banking?
Reply · 1 · Like · July 15 at 2:47pm

Grover Brillhart · Independent Financial Planner at Ayres Financial Group
You don't have to do business if you don't want to.
Reply · 2 · Like · July 15 at 6:37am

View 6 more

Facebook social plugin

Sponsored Links

For The Sender
Songs & Stories of Release, Redemption & Realization - ...
<http://www.forthesender.com/>

"The Shift" Special Offer
Watch "The Shift" by ...
www.hayhouse.com

Medical Phenomenon $9.99
Everyone Should Know About It. Your Healthy Living, Aging, ...
www.MedicalPhenomenonBook.Com

Buy a link here

USA TODAY Digital Services

Mobile | E-Newsletters | RSS | Twitter | Podcasts | Widgets | e-Edition | USA TODAY for iPad | Kindle Edition | Subscribe to Home Delivery | Reprints & Permissions | USA TODAY Topics | Reporter Index | Corrections/Clarifications | Contact Us | Archives

Home | News | Travel | Money | Sports | Life | Tech | Weather

Visit our Partners: USA WEEKEND | Sports Weekly | Education | Space.com | Travel Tips

Contact us | Advertise | Us About Us | Jobs | FAQ | Reprints/Permissions | Privacy Notice/Your California Privacy Rights | Ad Choices | Terms of Service | Site Index

Reply · 3 · Like · July 15 at 3:54am

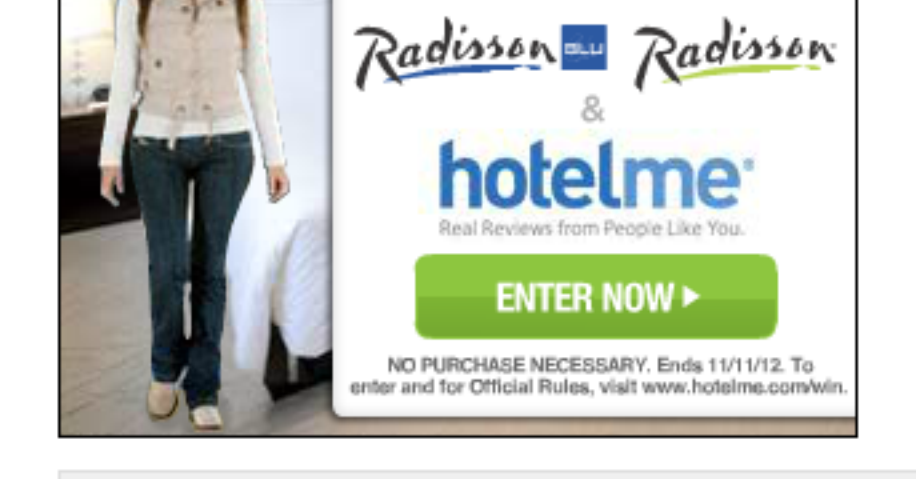

Mickey Cashen · Top Commenter · Illinois Institute of Technology
Don't the wealthy see that if they keep redistributing the middle class's money into their incomes 1/6 of

Videos you may be interested in

Gov. Walker to RNC, Romney a reformer | 80 year-old farmer survives 8 lightning strikes | Dash cam video captures Sikh temple shooting

by Taboola
More videos

Most Popular

Stories

- Anti-Islamic filmmaker arrested
- Chef who cooked wife's body guilty
- Israeli PM addresses Iran nukes at U.N...
- Sex trafficking in the USA hits close to...
- Red states' income growing faster than blue...

Videos

- NASA: Ancient evidence of Mars streambed found
- Global bacon shortage
- McIntyre Reacts to

Photos

- Editorial Cartoons
- Baby animals spring up at zoos
- Unrest in Syria

Most Popular E-mail Newsletter

Sign up to get:
Top viewed stories, photo galleries and community posts of the day

Most popular right now:
Mars rover uncovers evidence of water flows

Sign up for USA TODAY E-mail newsletters

